BROOKLYN DELAYED IN HER DEPARTURE FOR PENSACOLA

AMMUNITION DID NOT ARRIVE AND AS CONSEQUENCE BIG VESSEL WILL NOT LEAVE NEW ORLEANS UNTIL SOME TIME DURING TO-DAY.

The cruiser Brooklyn, which has been in New Orleans for several weeks, did not reach Pensacola yesterday morning as anticipated, being delayed at that port on account of the non-arrival of a large amount of ammunition. It is expected, however, that she will sail from New Orleans this morning and consequently will reach here to-morrow. The New Orleans Playmate of yesterday in speaking of the Brooklyn said:

"Owing to the failure of three carloads of ammunition to arrive here on time the cruiser Brooklyn will not leave here until Tuesday morning, and if there is a further delay in the arrival of the firing materials the ship's departure will be deferred probably a day or two later."

"The Brooklyn was to have sailed from here yesterday morning, but the departure was delayed pending the arrival of the three cars, only one of which has come. This will give Captain Hawley and the officers and men an opportunity of spending another Sunday in New Orleans. The delay will also give the public another chance of visiting the ship, as visitors will be received aboard this afternoon from 1 to 5 o'clock. This morning Captain Hawley will make his usual weekly inspection, and the officers and men will be assembled at quarters, after which the enlisted men will have the balance of the day for their own recreation."

"Visitors were allowed on the Brooklyn yesterday for only an hour. The tug Polo started carrying passengers at 2 o'clock, but an hour later the captain of the boat was notified by the officer of the deck that on account of the inclement weather no more visitors would be received. Instructions were also given to take the passengers off the ship as quickly as possible."

"About fifty bluejackets attached to the Brooklyn crew, who were given shore-leave, have been reported missing. They have not been entered on the ship's log as deserters, but unless the men show up before the vessel sails they will be put in that class. Captain Hawley believes that the deserters will come back all right, as they have been careless on account of the Carnival festivities."

Coffin Plates Once Used as House Ornaments in Maine.

In New England 100 years ago it was by no means uncommon for people to provide their coffins long before their death and keep the same in their houses, where they could see them every day. It was perhaps a custom having the same purpose and significance as the skeleton at the feast of the ancient Greeks, to remind the living in their hours of levity of the seriousness of life and the certainty of death.

This was not the idea, however, of a man named Lindsey, whom people now living in Leeds may remember or at least have heard of. He built his own coffin many years before he died and used to keep it in a chamber of his house. He used it generally to keep beans in. It was a very fine coffin, made of mahogany and nicely finished and polished. Mr. Lindsey made it with his own hands and gave as reason that if he left the task of providing him with a coffin to his sons it would be just like them to put him in a hemlock one. Perhaps the boys did not relish the implication. At any rate, they did not like to have the coffin about the house and took it away one night and threw it into the river. It was found several miles below, considerably broken and battered as it went over the rips, and old Lindsey heard about it, drove down and got it and was finally buried in it.

Another queer custom that prevailed in this section of Maine down to a comparatively recent date was that of removing the plate from the coffin after the funeral and just before the body was lowered into the grave and keeping it in the best room in the house among the ornaments and bric-a-brac. The writer saw one of these ghoulish exhibits on the mantel of a Lincolnville parlor not more than twenty-five years ago, and we shouldn't be surprised if quite a number of them could be found in the old houses throughout Maine.—Bangor News.

BOOKS.

A collection of books is a real university.—Carlyle.

Some books are to be tested, others to be swallowed and some few to be chewed and digested.—Bacon.

A good book is the precious lifeblood of a master spirit embalmed and treasured up on purpose to a life beyond life.—Milton.

We can take reproach patiently from a book, but not from a tongue. The book hurts not our pride; the living reprover does.—T. Adams.

If the secret history of books could be written, how many insipid volumes would become interesting and dull tales excite the reader!—Thackeray.

Of all the privileges we enjoy in this century there is none perhaps for which we ought to be more thankful than for the easier access to books.—Lubbock.

Women's Cruelty.

A society woman at a dinner in Washington adverted to cruelty. "Women can be very cruel," she said. "Some of them can be very cunning too. Some of them can wound you so dextrously that before you know you have been wounded their escape is made."

"Once I saw a young woman wound a slightly older one in that way. She approached the older one at a ball. She greeted her with a radiant smile. She inflicted her wound, and while her victim still thought the wound a compliment she walked away. This is what, in a very loud, clear voice, she said:

"Oh, Helen, dear, that perfect gown! I think it looks lovelier every year!"—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Meteors.

The heights of many meteors have been measured by W. F. Denning, the English astronomer. It appears that the swift meteors become visible at an average height of eighty-four miles and disappear at fifty-six miles, while the very slow meteors come in sight at about sixty-five miles and fade away at thirty-eight miles. Of the very slow meteors those that become visible at the greatest heights come twenty miles nearer the earth than those of very low radiant.

The Three Points of View.

The stork came. Said the man, "My salary is no larger."

Said the woman, "Now I shall be let down."

Said the newspaper, "Mr. and Mrs. B. are rejoicing in the birth of a son."—Life.

Her Fate.

Mrs. De Work—I have trained my eldest daughter into a thorough housekeeper. There is nothing she does not know. Miss De Flight—What a nice, handy maid! And she will make for your other daughters' children!

Her Excuse.

Missess—Don't deny it, Bridget. I saw you permit that policeman to kiss you last evening. Bridget—Well, ma'am ye wouldn't have me be locked up for resistin' an officer, would ye?—Philadelphia Ledger.

A Vital Spot.

"My goodness! Mrs. McTalker was shot by a burglar last night!" "Did he hit her in a vital spot?" "Well—er—yes. The bullet lodged in her jaw."—Cleveland Leader.

Their Excessive Grief.

Lord Brampton related that once while he was plain John Hawkins he defended a man for wife murder. The prisoner's two children, dressed in black and sobbing violently, were in court, and their grief and the lawyer's eloquent speech combined to acquit the defendant. That evening at dinner he met an old inhabitant of the neighborhood, who complimented him upon his speech. "However," he added, "I think that if you had seen what I did when driving past the prisoner's cottage last week you would not have painted the home in such glowing colors. The little children who sobbed so violently in court this morning and to whom you made such pathetic reference were playing on an ash heap near their cottage, and they had a poor cat with a string round its neck swaying backward and forward, and as they did, so they sang:

"This is the way poor daddy will go, This is the way poor daddy will go!"

"Such, Mr. Hawkins, was their excessive grief."

Bengalese Superstitions.

Among the Bengalese it is said that shouting the name of the king of birds (garunda) drives away snakes. Shouting "Ram! Ram!" drives away ghosts. Cholera that attacks on Monday or Saturday always proves fatal. Cholera that attacks on Thursday never ends fatally. The flowering of the bamboo means famine. In fanning if the fan strike the body it should be instantly knocked three times against the ground. When giving alms the giver and receiver should both be on the same side of the threshold. It is bad to pick one's teeth with the nails. If a snake be killed it should immediately be burned, for all serpents that are so unwise as to permit of having their lives taken are inhabited by the souls of Brahmins, which hope thus to escape and work mischief. The words "snake" and "tiger" should never be used after nightfall. Call them "creepers" and "insects." Never awaken a sleeping physician. Morning dreams always come true.

Women Slaves in Palestine.

In Palestine the mother of men is the servant of men. Being a part of the household chattels, she is sold for as large a sum as her father can extort from the prospective bridegroom. She is a thing, a piece of goods. The father of a firstborn son proudly calls himself after the boy's name, but his girl babe is not reckoned among his children. Her infant shoulders learn to bear the burdens. Her little feet patter their way to the fountain even from the moment their tiny strength can support the weight of the jar. Her whole life is one of grinding, baking, fetching water, waiting upon others. At twelve she is sold into married service. Growing old in middle life, she may see herself supplanted by a younger wife, often being robbed of her sons by the military conscription, and finally she is put away as the last breath is leaving her body.—Corwin Knapp Linson in Metropolitan Magazine.

What a Hand May Mean.

In all my experiences and thoughts I am conscious of a hand. Whatever touches me, whatever thrills me, is as a hand that touches me in the dark, and that touch is my reality. You might as well say that a sight which makes you glad or a blow which brings the stinging tears to your eyes is unreal as to say that those impressions are unreal which I have accumulated by means of touch. The delicate tremble of a butterfly's wings in my hand, the soft petals of violets curling in the cool folds of their leaves or lifting sweetly out of the meadow grass, the clear, firm outline of face and limb, the smooth arch of a horse's neck and the velvety touch of his nose—all these and a thousand resultant combinations, which take shape in my mind, constitute my world.—Helen Keller in Century.

THE STRIKE SITUATION

LITTLE IMPROVEMENT NOTICED.

ALL CARS RUNNING ARE CROWDED.

By Associated Press.

New York, March 13.—That the condition resulting from the strike on the Interborough Rapid Transit Company's lines has not been adjusted was plainly apparent to-day. Although the strikers had been repudiated by their national organization and even advised by their local officers to make an effort to get back their old places and the Interborough Company had announced that the effect of the strike had passed, schedules were more irregular and inadequate to-day than at any time since last Tuesday. Even in the subway, where the company concentrated nearly all its efforts for several days to perfect the force of operatives from among the strike-breakers and where everything appeared to be approaching a normal basis last week, the service to-day was far from satisfactory. Trains were operated in fairly large numbers, but at a reduced speed. All trains were greatly overcrowded.

It was on the elevated lines that the conditions were at their worst, however. The Ninth and Sixth avenue lines on the west side which were making fairly good time last week were operated to-day apparently with great difficulty.

As far uptown as 116th street the cars became crowded and a repetition of last week's scenes of packed trains, people unable to get aboard and men climbing to the roofs were repeated. Even during the rush hours from fifteen to thirty minutes would pass between trains.

At the offices of the Interborough Company it was announced that 500 of the strikers would be re-employed during the day. It was said that the officials are gradually weeding out the inefficient men employed as strike-breakers and filling their vacancies with the former employees of the road. By to-morrow the company expects that the trains on both the elevated and the subway will be running in first-class shape.

MORE EVIDENCE.

It is Coming In Rapidly in Pensacola.

Evidence on the following subject will prove of interest to every Pensacola reader. So many people go through the same experience daily. This public statement should be proof positive to every wavering doubter. Read it carefully:

John Stearns, ship carpenter by trade, living on West Zaragoza street, says: "Doan's Kidney Pills proved more than a bonanza to me when I was in a pretty bad condition. I had backache, indigestion and sluggish kidneys. The kidney secretions were not normal and caused me inconvenience. There was also more or less brickdust sediment and they were of a reddish and unnatural color. I also had spells of dizziness and severe headaches. My back ached after a hard day's work and often it was as much as I could do to get home in the evening on account of my back pain. I was so across the kidneys. By accident I came across an advertisement about Doan's Kidney Pills, and thinking that they might help me, I procured a box at Sidney Kahn's drug store, No. 9 South Palafox street. The first box helped me wonderfully and I continued the treatment. The secretions from the kidneys were entirely corrected and backache became a thing of the past, while the indigestion from which I had suffered was relieved, as well as the headaches and dizziness. I can say both from experience and observation that Doan's Kidney Pills are a reliable kidney remedy."
